

CRUISE SHIP LOCATIONS 18 DECEMBER 2021

Compiled by Mike Pryce, Wellington NZ

(Information believed correct at this date. Compiled from various sources and internet AIS, especially www.cruisemapper.com. Excludes ferries and cruise ferries.

Some cruise ships have been in lay-up for 20 months, as the initial Covid-19 “pause” was continually extended due to more outbreaks, and many financial assumptions made on the expectation of an initial two-months lockdown were reviewed. This resulted in some sales of older ships, and initially limited cruising in the Mediterranean and Europe.

The largest number of cruised ships were laid up on the Great Bahamas Banks, but most have now returned to service. Only a few cruise ships remain anchored off the south coast of England, west of Southampton.

With winter in the northern hemisphere, many of the cruise ships have moved south from Europe and the Mediterranean to warmer climates in the Azores, Canaries, Cape Verde, or back across the Atlantic to the Caribbean cruise ports. Some have sailed past South America and are now cruising Antarctica.

Updates and advice of corrections always welcome. My e-mail: pryce@xtra.co.nz
